	PATIO by Pepsi - CHOICE OUT ON THE PATIO BOTTLES	Just Information about the bottles: This is a 1963 16 oz. Patio Diet Cola bottle. Patio was produced by Pepsi and was changed in 1964 to what it is still known as today, Diet Pepsi. It was marketed at women and was Pepsi's first diet drink, in competition	with the first ever diet cola, Diet Rite (RC/Royal Crown Cola). Patio introduced other flavors that I believe continued to sell under the Patio name	even after the cola was renamed Diet Pepsi. Patio was famously featured on an episode of Mad Men. 405 B	Orange Crush Embossed Ribbed Bottle With Logo in Diamond Shape on Both Sides, Hancock, MI	For decades Orange (and other flavors) of Crush soda were packaged in a bottle that the company promoted as the "Krinkly" bottle. The design was patented in 1920 by Orange Crush partner, Neil C. Ward and the corporation's secretary, Eric Scudder.			1
405C	Orange Crush Embossed Ribbed Bottle With Logo in Diamond Shape on Both Sides	Like many early soft-drink beverages, Orange Crush was created by a chemist, Neil C. Ward, and was originally called "Ward's Orange Crush". When Ward cofounded the company in 1911 with Clayton J. Howell,	Actual orange pulp was part of the original formula. (It was used through to 1930 but eventually dropped from the mixture.) The Dr. Pepper/Snapple Group now owns the Crush line of beverages.	The character on the Bottles is called Crushy	1
