The blade of this Spyderco knife has a full flat grind and the Spyderco hole for ambidextrous one hand opening. The handle, 2.50" closed, has a Blue Nishijin Glass Fiber front scale, stainless steel back scale, R.I.L. (Reeve Integral Lock) and a lanyard hole. A removable steel pocket clip is mounted at the pivot end of this Spyderco Knife. The Spyderco Spin Knife with Blue Nishijin Glass Fiber handle has an overall open length of 4.12", and it weighs 1.2 ounces. Limited quantities, made in Japan. From the Spyderco website regarding the Nishijin handle: The handle is Japanese Nishijin glass fiber. The name Nishijin references a specific weave pattern, used in the production of silk Kimono cloth. It is manufactured by weaving glass fibers (thinner than a human hair), together in a geometric pattern and then impregnating the fibers into polymer base. The outcome is a lightweight, ultra-strong handle material that has an attractive three dimension appearance.

56		Spyderco C71 Salsa Folding Knife in Rare PURPLE	Spyderco C71 Salsa Folding Knife in Rare PURPLE. One batch of the Spyderco Salsa Blue, came out a purple color These could be considered Rare, as there would be far less of them Collectors have named this small batch " The Blurple Salsa". From Spyderco Website: The Salsa launched Spyderco's line of Little Big Knives beginning the company's trend (and the knife world's trend) toward small to medium sized knives capable of large knife performance. This aluminum Salsa comes with a lightweight purple anodized aluminum handle scale that resists scratching and pitting. Nested into the scale is a Compression Lock®, outfitting the little knife with big knife lock strength. At only 2-7/16 inches in length, the flat-ground AUS-8 blade is capped with a Cobra Hood™. The hood is positioned in a parallel line with the finger choil so the thumb atop the hood lines up comfortably with the index finger set in the choil. That creates the feeling of holding a large handle. That combined with the wide, short blade makes the whole package feel like a full-sized folder. For the convenience of left or right-hand carry the tension-spring wire clip positions tip-up to either side of the handle. Condition: VG Used Condition. Evidence of Carry with minor marks to aluminum scales, and loss of finish to high points, see photos. NO evidence of sharpening. NO BOX or PAPERS.

86		Spyderco C145GP, Jens Anso Zulu Knife	Spyderco C145GP, Jens Anso Zulu Knife. From the Spyderco Archives: A Popular Mechanics article inspired Danish teenage Jens Anso to take a drill press and power tools to an old metal file and make his first knife. When Gretzky slapped his first puck or Jordan tried out for the junior-high basketball team, history was written as it was when years later, an older Jens started innovating and modernizing old school European knifemaking. Anso's G-10 Zulu pioneers the process of chiseling out a G-10 handle scale to create a texture much like a topographical map. The peaks and ridges keep the knife firmly embraced in a gripping hand while offering a novel appearance. The handle houses a Michael Walker LinerLock® and is constructed using adjustable screws. A two-way: tip-up / tip-down right-hand clip is hourglass shaped lessening wear and abrasion in a pant's pocket. Made with Crucible Steel's CPM S30V, the Scimitar - shaped blade has a large radius hollow grind and a tapered spine-sledge, stretching from the blade's tip along the spine to the enlarged Spyderco Round Hole. Spyderco's second collaboration with Mr. Anso represents his modern interpretation of high-performance folder making with a time-honored reputation for Spyderco's quality. "One of the two popular military swords of the Ming and much of the Qing Dynasties. An excellent chop-and-slice sword, the Liuyedao has its origins from Chinese contact with the Turko-Mongol sabers their border foes wielded." Dynasty Forges Liueyedao, the Willow Leaf Saber, has a sharp blade imbued with three high carbon steel blades folded together into a single blade. These steels of varying hardness are 1095, 1080 and 1060 high carbon steel – their melding leaves a visible wood-grain like pattern on the blade. Folding steel was common in Chinese swordsmithing; the technique was done to purify the blade. Adding other steels with different properties was done to create a blade with a mixture of the desired properties of harder and softer steels. The blades dragon collar, guard and pommel are of antique-finished brass. The wooden grip is intricately knotted with tight black leather cord. The sword comes with a companion scabbard of carved wood with antiqued brass fittings and a hanging cord. 169		Rare, Mad Dog Knives, SEAL A.T.A.K. Knife Number 28	Rare, Mad Dog Knives SEAL A.T.A.K. Knife Number 28. Handmade, Mad Dog SEAL ATAK with numbered sheath. This knife is one of the first 50 knives made just prior to the Naval Special Warfare contract. This is it. This is the knife named the A.T.A.K. (Advanced Tactical Assault Knife) and Mad Dog Knives received a U.S. Navy Sole Source Justification for its manufacture. Mad Dog Knives was the company which won the 1992 "SEAL Trials" to supply the Naval Special Warfare Groups 1 and 2 with a fixed blade knife. The A.T.A.K. is only knife in US military history to be honored with sole source justification. Mad Dog knives make tactical fixed-blade knives, using Starrett 496-O1 high carbon tool steel which is then given a proprietary heat treatment. This process includes hardening, stress relieving, selectively tempering blade. As result, the blades have an edge hardness of 62-63 on the Rockwell C Scale, whereas the tip, spine, and tang have a hardness of 50-54. Treatment was devised to develop phenomenal edge retention while preventing tip breakage and a maintaining degree of flexibility. A softer spine improves toughness. The blades have a specially coated layer of hard chrome. This method provides great abrasion and corrosion resistance. Mad Dog Knives utilizes a glass epoxy composite fiberglass for handle material on its knives. It can withstand long term heat in excess of 149 degrees Celsius (300 Fahrenheit), tractive force of 79,000 psi, current of 1,000 volts per mil (0.001") thickness and is impervious to salt water, diesel oil, benzene other caustic corrosive fluids. Kydex sheath material specifications include "nonmagnetic metal rivets were used to manufacture sheath". Ergonomic grip indexes user's hand, thus letting user know how presented, even in dark conditions. Mad Dog Knives uses a compression bonded hidden full tang. Condition: Excellent Pre-owned condition. No evidence of carry or sharpening, light marks from handling. NO BOX or PAPERS.
